UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

UNITED STATES TROOPS.

We by before our readers the following petitions and correspondence relative to the occupation of the Court House and adjoining grounds, by a detachment of United States troops during the session of the court which commenced at Provo the 8th of March inst.

While the Judge was delivering his charge to the grand jury, at the opening of the court, in the house which had been procured by the county court of Utah county, the United States troops having made no provision therefor, a detachment of United States troops from Camp Floyd, about 100 in number, under the command of Capt. Heath, entered and encamped upon the adjoining grounds, belonging to the county, and the office of Provo, without permission, and to the establishment of the people, who were a little surprised at the military occupation of their court.

The presence of a drunken and boisterous soldiery, camp followers and muleteers by an assemblage in any city, and, in this case, it was justly considered an outrage, as no disorder has occurred; no officer had been resisted; consequently there had been no occasion for requiring even a pretense nominal of citizens, which, according to statement from the Department to the Governor of the Territory and the commanding General of the troops, was to be rendered in all cases, before the army of the United States, or any part in thereof, stationed in this Territory, was to be employed for the purpose of aiding or executing the laws.

On the 19th inst. the following petition was presented to the court council, signed by the officers of Provo:—

March 19, 1859.

To the Honorable the Mayor and City Council of the City of Provo:—

GENTLEMEN—We the undersigned feeling conscious aggrieved and outraged by the appearance of a military force in our peaceful city, surround and in our vicinity threatening the lives and liberty (more especially to represent to your honorable body our sense and feelings relative to what we regard a high handed outrage, a direct violation of our rights and liberties as citizens and a gross violation of our liberties and constitutional rights.

Whereas the Honorable Judge Cradlebaugh, associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the U. S. and acting Judge of the United States District of the Territory of Utah, proceeded to charge to the grand jury, stating, that the troops here, perhaps had an unusual thing for them to be here; I have had these men arrested, they were guilty not by the camp and also that there were many guilty among these and other troops. I was informed that there was no proof against any of the troops, but I have requested the General at my request to take care of prisoners now I would not be responsible for the acts of one. They are here to take care of the prisoners and to prevent the peace. If prisoners are brought here they will be taken care of and these whole soldiers will be to detain them, and in malady that are taken prisoners until they report to the Judge of the court and they have no power beyond that."

Whereas the above statement of his Honor the Judge, in relation to there being no jail here, is a gross, for it is well known to all our citizens and we have one, and that the civil officers, both of the city and county, had the authority to summon all assistance to secure and take care of prisoners if need be.

Whereas the Judge says that these troops are sent by the Commanding General of the Army who can only look upon it that he is either already in the pay of some party, or that he has been so intimidate private citizens, witnesses and jurors, and to represent that it is the opinion of the first, and the quartering of officers as a sovereign power that of the jury, will be of a slight cutting between, and the surrounding the court with such a force like the latter.

The Judge has truly said it is an "unusual thing" for a court to be surrounded by an unnecessary and unprecedented military force, and we can only look upon it that he is either already in the pay of some party, or that he has been so intimidated by the presentation of judicial terrorism and

And whereas we regard his Honor's statement that "they are here to take care of the prisoners and to preserve the peace"—the first as being an attack upon the Judiciary of our civil rights, and the second a direct insult to the inhabitants of this city—we respectfully represent that we are free and uphold the laws and institutions of our common country and all citizens of the United states, where they confine themselves within the limits of the laws, constitution and institutions, but when the rights of American citizens are wantonly trodden upon and it is made a sport to crate the law by the terrorism of sword and bayonet, we hold such demonstrations to be subversive of our contempt and feel ourselves called upon to remonstrate against such indignities.

We therefore request your honorable body to order the removal of these troops from our city.

Upon the receipt of this petition the city council addressed the following to Judge Cradlebaugh:—

Provo, March 11, 1859.

To the Honorable Judge Cradlebaugh, associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States for Utah Territory and acting Judge of the 2d Judicial District.

Your memorialists, the mayor and council of Provo city, pure respectfully represent that,

WHEREAS, The city council have received petitions from the various wards of the city representing that a detachment of the United States troops for several days encamped in our community in, the vicinity of our court house, occupying the most lower room of the seminary building within the precincts of the seminary, and also, tending it excessingly difficult for citizens of the city to procure a place between the hourly parting of the morning and evening, several settlement communities having already occurred and their present location should the seminary situated at a distance inconvenient for the municipal regulations of American citizens.

Your memorialists respectfully pray your Honor to cause the immediate removal of the troops now occupying the seminary and vicinity, to land the limits of the city. Your memorialists as in duty bound will ever pray.

On behalf of the city council,

R. K. BULLOCK, Mayor.

Judge Cradlebaugh replied:—

Provo, March 19, 1859.

To the Honorable the Mayor and City Council of Provo:

Gentlemen—your letter of the 11th inst. has not been received. In reply to it I take occasion to say that the movement of a company of infantry to this city and their temporary location here was and considered before it was determined upon. It was a matter of necessity. There were a number of prisoners to be tried before my court, and the Territory not to be put to the expense of the erection of a place of confinement for them. No measure of precaution had been taken for their support or maintenance, neither by the Territory nor your city. To secure these prisoners and to maintain them are duties that I owe to the Territory.

I have adopted the only means left me of accomplishing them. The troops are here under my county, kindly furnished by the commanding General to secure and support these prisoners. That this court house should be near the court house, or the building used as such, is a matter of convenience but of necessity to the Territory. You I know, however, that you and I can dispense with these most social services, and I will do so.

You speak of their presence to the assemblage of the convocation of this city and intimidation of witnesses being business with the United States.

You speak of their presence to the assemblage of the convocation of this city and intimidation of witnesses and jurors as if I had anything to do with it. I never saw, they never spoke to me, and I do not know that any witness or jurors have intimidated, allow me to say that I cannot, I do not,
